The Lucille Lortel Theatre
121 Christopher Street

The New York Idea, adapted by Proof playwright David Auburn, is a sharp-tongued comedy which shines a surprisingly contemporary light on social mores in high society in the New York City over a century ago. A brief discussion will follow on the role of women in society.

WoW cultural events are part of the WoW social activities that help promote the participation of women in science by establishing strong networks of support and exchange of various academic and personal issues that strengthen connections and raise awareness of key issues to help support women in their studies and retain them in the sciences.
